San Rocco recognised at the Alpe Adria Award 2013

Istria Tourist Board has reported that hotel and restaurant San Rocco, in the Istrian town of Brtonigla, had recently scooped an accolade at the Alpe Adria Awards 2013.

The ceremony was held at the Villa Widman Rezzonico Foscari in the municipality of Mira, near Venice, Italy.

The event was a culmination of a three-day gastronomic gathering which presented and promoted Alpe Adria – macro-region which encompasses nine regions in four countries, namely Italy, Austria, Slovenia and Croatia. It gathered acclaimed chefs, media representatives, celebrities and many others.

San Rocco was recognised as the best hotel restaurant in the region, with an official comment from the judges: "An expression of a new Croatia in all its delicate textures – land, sea, oil, vinegar, wine, garden, meat. Everything takes place in a biological rhythm and according to the specific programmes in the resort of authentic charm with a copyright kitchen."

The award was received by owners, San Rocco, Teo and Rita Fernetich. During the presentation of the property, Teo Fernetich, who is also president – Croatia, Jeunes Restaurateurs d'Europe, and executive chef, Zoran Čobanov, treated guests to a range of delicacies from San Rocco.
